Insights and Implications for Communication and Relational Challenges in Nursing

Elaine Meyer, PhD, RN is an associate professor of psychology in the Department of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School. She brings her dual background as a psychiatric nurse and clinical psychologist to her leadership and teaching roles within the Institute for Professionalism and Ethical Practice at Boston Children's Hospital. Elaine's academic work has focused on patient and family perspectives as they relate to critical care illness, pediatric end-of-life care situations, and providing innovative psychosocial services within healthcare organizations. She has championed creative and comprehensive psychological services for children and their families, emphasizing the priorities that families themselves have identified. She has published widely in the field and presents often at national and international conferences. She frequently reviews books for the Journal of the American Medical Association, serves on the Children and Adolescent Task Force on End-of-Life Issues of the American Psychological Association, and serves on the Editorial Board of Simulation in Healthcare.
